

Topic: The Life of a Future Physician

Introduction: Step inside my interactive exhibit, "On Call: A Journey into Health," where you'll experience the sights, sounds, smells, textures, and tastes that have inspired my pursuit of a medical career.

Sight:

Story: Watching doctors' reassuring hand gestures as they delicately explained my grandma's cancer diagnosis

Lesson: The power of skilled bedside manner and empathetic visual communication

Sound:

Story: The rhythm of my father's heart murmur, which I learned to monitor as a child

Lesson: Developing an ear for subtle patterns in personal health

Smell:

Story: The astringent hotel odor during my hospital volunteering

Lesson: Acquiring a burnished nose patch for the harsh smells of illness and sanitization

Touch:

Story: Tennis ball technique to release neck tension for my frequently stressed mother

Lesson: Simple therapeutic opportunities through prudent human touch

Taste:

Story: A surprisingly sweet lozenge during my tonsillectomy recovery

Lesson: Empathizing with cravings and discovering small comforts during healing

Conclusion: Conclude your tour by learning about my upcoming internship and future medical school aspirations. This experience has been a small taste of the enriching life I hope to lead, supporting communities through the art and science of caring for the human body.
